Information About Your Union

Why we exist

We exist to defend workers' rights. We have highly skilled Organisers, who can give you advice on pay and conditions, health and safety issues, and support on discrimination, bullying and unfair dismissal matters.

We also have experienced Industrial Officers who can assist you with Industrial matters.

Brief History

Our branch of the ASU is the Central and Southern Queensland Clerical and Administrative Branch.

It has its origins in the Federated Clerks' Union, which came into being early in the 20th Century, following the struggles of workers during the great depressions of the 1880s and 1890s.

In 1993, the Federated Clerks' Union ceased to exist as a trade union when it amalgamated nationally and state-wide to form the ASU, the largest white-collar union in Australia.

The ASU has approximately 120,000 members nationally, and our branch has about 10,000 members in Central and Southern Queensland.
